Faculty Spotlight: Suzanne Dovi
Political Science Associate Professor

At what institution did you do your undergraduate and graduate work?

Professor Suzanne Dovi received a Bachelor of Arts from Dartmouth College, a Master of Letters from Trinity College Dublin, a Master of Arts in Political Science from Georgetown University, and a Ph.D. from Princeton University.

What was your favorite course from your undergraduate career?

One course that stands out to me was an education course that discussed problems with the American education system; the course was set up to demonstrate certain problems, such as the imbalanced hierarchy between professors and students. The students graded each other, and papers could be rewritten as many times as you wanted.

What is your field of research?

Democratic theory, with a particular focus on structural forms of inequality. My most cited work involves the representation of women and minority groups and those works that consider the roles of representatives in our political system. Some other topics of my research include the representation of victims in International Criminal Court, misogyny, gender diversity in the judiciary, and political injustice in general.

What initiated your interest in this field?

I loved to read as a child. I remember arguing with my dad about the death penalty in my early elementary years, and I have always felt a strong sense of injustice. We are only in this world for a short time, and I believe we should try to make the world a better place. I have also been influenced by major world events. I remember things that I once thought impossible, like the fall of the Berlin Wall and a peaceful end to Apartheid in South Africa. Those events made me aware that humans have the capacity to change the world.
Faculty Spotlight: Suzanne Dovi
Political Science Associate Professor

What inspired you to want to teach, and what do you believe your role is in the student’s academic journey?

I love teaching! I feel that, many times, professors are stuck in a “60s mentality” – that is, if they show the student how bad an issue is, e.g. the Vietnam War, then policies will change. But I no longer believe that making students aware of issues, or of them becoming critical thinkers is enough. It is important to encourage students to be problem-solvers or constructive thinkers. For this reason, I encourage my students to read different theoretical ways of seeing the political world and apply these ideas to different types of real-world problems. In other words, I want students to look at contemporary issues such as mass incarceration and gender pay.

What words of advice do you have for your students?

You need to find a way to secure a job that cannot be done by a computer. My courses are not about regurgitating what I say, and the courses challenge you to be creative and undertake non-traditional writing and assignments. Prepare to come and to figure out your opinions about hard political questions. I hope you read something you love and something that makes you angry, as both can encourage intellectual growth.

What do you like to do in your free time?

Beyond academics, I am a total book and documentary film buff. I most definitely enjoy hiking. I am a mother to two awesome kids!

Who is your greatest inspiration?

One person who immediately comes to mind is Jane Adams, who was the subject of my dissertation. She believed that wealthy and poor individuals needed to live together in democracies in order to facilitate the connections that provide mutual understanding and common interests.

About Step Up to Justice
Step Up to Justice is an award winning, full-service, free civil legal center for low-income individuals and families in Pima County, powered by the talents of volunteer attorneys. Through careful financial stewardship and technology designed to bring civil legal services to clients where and when they need them, Step Up to Justice builds connections between clients, attorneys and community partners. Step Up to Justice is ground-breaking, forward-thinking and committed to advancing efforts to secure equal access to justice for all.

Brief Description of Position:
SU2J currently accepts new applications for legal services through the organization's website. SU2J does not have an employee to staff its front desk, or to assist with walk-in or telephone applications. Although our research indicates that most applicants who are eligible for SU2J services have access to a computer or other wi-fi enabled device – and can apply for help online – some applicants do not. To address this barrier to services, SU2J is hiring a full-time, bilingual Spanish speaker to fill the role of bilingual receptionist/intake specialist. The candidate selected for this position will respond to calls from low-income individuals and families facing civil legal issues, including referrals made to SU2J by its 23 partner organizations. The person in this position will serve as the initial point of contact for applicants seeking legal assistance. In addition to responding to calls and connecting with applicants, we anticipate the candidate selected for this position will conduct new applicant intakes, assist with coordination of legal clinics and provide support for SU2J’s staff and fellows.

Purpose of Receptionist/Intake Specialist Position:
The receptionist/intake specialist will have the chance to be part of a new non-profit, working directly with staff to build the organization’s capacity and expand SU2J’s mission of providing quality free civil legal services for the community through partnership and innovation throughout Pima County. In addition, the receptionist/intake specialist fills a need for additional bilingual support for free civil legal services in the community.

Site Specific Guidelines and Requirements for Legal Intake Specialist Position:
After receiving training by SU2J, the receptionist/intake specialist will speak with applicants to determine whether they are financially and asset eligible to receive legal services from SU2J. The legal intake specialist will also determine if there are legal conflicts of interest and conduct an interview to gather facts about the applicant’s case.

Applicants should feel comfortable speaking with potential clients about obtaining civil legal services. Applicants are expected to quickly gain a deeper understanding of access to justice issues facing low-income Pima County residents, and how SU2J – partnered with various agencies and the courts – is working to address these challenges.

Obligations to the Bilingual Legal Intake Specialist:
SU2J staff will provide initial the training required to ensure that the receptionist/intake specialist is able to conduct new applicant intakes, assist with coordination of legal clinics and provide support for SU2J’s staff and fellows. After training, the receptionist/intake specialist will receive continuing support, supervision, and guidance by SU2J's Director of Community Outreach / Staff Attorney. They will also receive continuing support and guidance from the organization’s Executive Director and Fellow. All three, full-time staff members are available to answer questions and help navigate the client interviewing process. Staff are also available for professional mentoring.

Position Details:

Spanish fluency is required.

Salary: $25,000 per year plus benefits.

Applications:

Interested applicants should submit a resume and cover letter to mmintz@steputojustice.org.
