

Five Essential Skills to Create Social Change More Efficiently and Effectively

How do we keep up with the speed of change and address increasingly complex challenges in our communities?

We empower people to pause and use simple, yet powerful problem-solving skills to efficiently and effectively move through uncertainty.

Even though the challenges and opportunities we face can be enormously complex, the skills we adopt to achieve deep impact can be streamlined and simplified.

In this hands-on workshop, attendees will practice five key skills that have transformed the ways local government and other social impact organizations address problems. These skills can help you know what ideas to pursue in an environment of numerous diverse stakeholders, constrained resources, and unpredictable demographic, economic, and political shifts.

February 28, 2025

3:30 - 5:30pm

Social Sciences Bldg.
Room 222

Heather Hiscox, CEO and Founder of Pause for Change will walk attendees through individual and small group exercises and share examples from deploying these new skills to address multiple vexing challenges across many local government organizations.

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES
School of Government and Public Policy